HISTORY

Early origins of Bill Parton Trio trace back to 2001 at Brighton Secondary School (SA). Then and there William and Andy first met each other through the special interest music scholarship programs that they were both undertaking at the time. That year, they plus some other scholars in their year level formed a 7-piece Dixieland band in which William played the Banjo funny enough! Due to various complications the Dixieland band soon dispersed. Consequential to the Dixieland band dissolving was the formation of a smaller 3-piece instrumental Piano trio featuring William on Piano and Andrew on Drums.

At the time, the repertoire mainly revolved around a mix of traditional and mainstream jazz as well as a little bit of funk and latin. That being said, the band at the time hardly performed and mostly just jammed.

It was this Piano trio that overtime drastically evolved to become 'Bill Parton Trio' as we know it today.

BJ Music

Professional Music Service

To Whom It May Concern:

I have known William (Bill) Parton, and the "Bill Parton Trio" for 4 years.

From the moment I first heard the Trio perform I was very impressed by the very polished style which the group displayed in the execution of their music. Since hearing the Trio and meeting the members Bill, Andrew, and Ben, I was invited on many occasions to play trombone with them for selected engagements of which I readily accepted.

Mainly playing carefully selected standard swing and Latin pieces, some from the Jazz idiom, then mixed with a clever crossover to more radio play styles, however maintaining their own sound through the vocal style of Bill, at the keyboard, I am sure this is what made me, and many other listeners support this fine ensemble. I know many people who have enjoyed listening to the "Bill Parton Trio."

During the past twelve months I have also noticed the inclusion of original material. This music is a good mixture of popular styles. It contains some jazz element, however, at no time displays a self-indulgent visual or listening element to the audience.

Being a professional musician for over 35 years now, and working as a professional music arranger, studio / recording artist and producer, I have recognized the professional quality with which the group is managed. I believe all the business and organizational skills are above normal standards of which I occasionally experience.

I, Bob Johnson, do know that the "Bill Parton Trio" has the potential to represent the Australian Arts in music performance, with original creativity, producing quality music for all to enjoy for many years to come.

With professional support, the "Bill Parton Trio" would no doubt prove to be a positive asset to all parties involved.

Yours truly,

Bob Johnson

RE: BILL PARTON TRIO

I have been a company director for the past 40 years. In this time I have served on different company boards and associations of which one was the Adelaide West End Association Inc. I was the Secretary of the Association for several years and part of the committee to keep live music in Adelaide.

Over the years I have met and formed good relationships with many of South Australia's bands, trios and jazz musicians. I came across the Bill Parton Trio back when they were first testing the local waters of SA gigs. I have followed the Trio over several years, seeing them go from strength to strength with every venue they appear at.

The Trio's leader, songwriter, musician and singer, Mr Bill Parton stands out as a young South Australia talent waiting for the world to discover Bill and his fellow musicians, Ben Harrison and Andy Partington, namely the Bill Parton Trio.

I have no hesitation in bringing this young group to your attention and I have no doubt that their talent, enthusiasm and drive, coupled with financial backing, will enable them to make a success of their music career.

Yours sincerely

To Whom It May Concern

From Don Brow, Editor, Australian Jazz Scene Magazine now in its 15th year of publication. Musician, clarinet, saxophone and flute. Leader of Dukes of Jazz for 29 years.

I have known Bill Parton since he was 15 years of age. In my contact over the period to the present day I have admired his many talents as a pianist, vocalist and promoter in the field jazz. I have always found him to have a genuine interest and enthusiasm and professional approach to any field of endeavour he has been involved in.

The Bill Parton Trio have been playing around the Adelaide jazz scene for since 2001 and have proved to be a popular, entertaining, competent band with a wide repertoire of musical styles. I have taken a keen interest in the gradual progress of the band over that period. They now present as very professional unit.

The band members, Bill Parton, Jeremy Martin and Andrew Partington are all talented, highly motivated skilled musicians and I feel they have the potential to succeed in the music/entertainment industry.

To Whom It May Concern

I have known William Parton for a period of three years, mainly in my capacity as a musical writer and President of the Southern Jazz Club in Adelaide, South Australia.

Bill has developed a thorough grounding in music from his studies at school, reaching a proficiency level well beyond his years. His interest in music has resulted in his forming a group, known as the Bill Parton Trio, which has become well established on the local performance scene, interrupted briefly by his intensive studies in Year 12.

Bill is proficient at the keyboards and is developing a distinctive vocal style, with a personality that is conducive to leadership and performance in public. With the considerable assistance of his musical colleagues, the Bill Parton Trio has made an impact that is extremely rare in consideration of their youth. If they stay together, there are boundless possibilities.

In 2005, Bill was awarded the President's Trophy by the Southern Jazz Club; a presentation made each year to a young musician of unusual potential. He was a worthy recipient and the Committee expect that he will move on to further recognition as his talents are nurtured and developed.

I have no hesitation in recommending Bill Parton to those who may be considering the utilisation of his musical talents.

Yours sincerely,
Ron Spain.
