To Whom It May Concern

From Don Brow, Editor, Australian Jazz Scene Magazine now in its 15th year of publication. Musician, clarinet, saxophone and flute. Leader of Dukes of Jazz for 29 years.

I have known Bill Parton since he was 15 years of age. In my contact over the period to the present day I have admired his many talents as a pianist, vocalist and promoter in the field jazz. I have always found him to have a genuine interest and enthusiasm and professional approach to any field of endeavour he has been involved in.

The Bill Parton Trio have been playing around the Adelaide jazz scene for since 2001 and have proved to be a popular, entertaining, competent band with a wide repertoire of musical styles. I have taken a keen interest in the gradual progress of the band over that period. They now present as very professional unit.

The band members, Bill Parton, Jeremy Martin and Andrew Partington are all talented, highly motivated skilled musicians and I feel they have the potential to succeed in the music/entertainment industry.
